NEED HIGH SPEED HOSTS COLUMBINE MEMORIAL WEB SITE

- Leading Front Range Internet Service Provider Ensures New Columbine Memorial Web Site is Up and Running -

Denver, Colo. – Need High Speed, Inc., a leading provider of high speed Internet services to the Front Range, today announced that it is providing web hosting services to the Columbine Memorial Committee's recently introduced Columbine Memorial website, www.ColumbineMemorial.org. The web site is dedicated to supporting the donation funding process to enable the completion of a permanent memorial to both honor and remember the victims of the April 20, 1999 shootings at Columbine High School.

Shortly after the April 20, 1999 tragedy, the Columbine Memorial Committee was formed, consisting of 28 members including students, faculty, parents, emergency responders and community and business leaders. The Committee has been working on the Memorial plans for more than three years. The planning process included the selection of a design consulting team, conducting a series of public meetings, and compiling information gathered from over 3,500 survey responses collected by the Committee, and holding more than a year of design meetings focusing on input from families of the deceased and injured victims.

The information contained in the web site is designed to inform the Columbine community about the planned memorial, describing where and how to contribute to the project, and provides periodic updates on the project's progress. Additionally, the web site gives details on the memorial site's design details, donation announcements, public input and the project's schedule.

“We selected Need High Speed because we needed unsurpassed reliability for this very important memorial web project. Additionally, we wanted the personal touch that would be given by our local service provider,” according to Christa Saracco, spokesperson for the Columbine Memorial Committee. “It is critically important that this site be consistently up and running for our donors and visitors.”

“We were honored to be asked to host such an important site,” said Trevor Banister president and CEO of Need High Speed. “We value this opportunity to give back to our community.”

About Need High Speed

Need High Speed, Inc. (NHS) is a Colorado company headquartered in Lakewood, CO. NHS is dedicated to providing high speed communications services and solutions to the Front Range area by the best means possible. Recognizing that DSL and cable modems were unavailable in many areas and that T1 service was expensive, NHS has built a wireless network extending from Southern Fort Collins to Castle Rock to deliver badly needed Internet services.
